UNITED STATES NOTARY ASSOCIATION AND WORLD WIDE NOTARY FORM ALLIANCE FOR COUNTRY'S FIRST ONLINE NOTARIAL JOURNAL

The United States Notary Association (USNA) announced that it has formed an alliance with World Wide Notary (WWNotary), a leading provider of electronic notary services, to provide WWNotary's DigaSign Journal, a platform-independent, Internet-based notarial recordkeeping system for the country's 4½ million notaries public.

The agreement enables USNA to provide an electronic solution for notaries who wish to keep an electronic journal. DigaSign Journal accepts manual entries by the notary, ensures compliance with state journal requirements, stores the records on a secure Internet server, and produces the journal on demand for the notary to review, print or export in Adobe Portable Document Format (PDF)

USNA is also offering DigaSign Journal to notaries who are anticipating the next step to electronic notarization. WWNotary offers the DigaSign suite of applications that allows users in any industry—real estate, government, law, insurance, title, banking—to add their unique biometric signatures to documents transacted with DigaSign's digital signature and encryption technology.

“DigaSign journal is the logical next step in electronic notary journals, and USNA is proud to partner with a leader in eNotarization technology,” said USNA's president, Marc Aronson.

“Notaries may now keep electronic journals that offer seamless transitions to eNotarization with other DigaSign applications. At the same time, the notary who wants only to keep an electronic journal can easily and efficiently do just that.”

USNA has worked closely with WWNotary during the last two years to ensure that DigaSign Journal, which is updated online in real time, complies with state notary public law requirements in all 50 states and the District of Columbia.
